Interject Data Systems and Greater Vancouver Chamber Receive Workforce Awards

Workforce Southwest Washington (WSW) presented the Excellence in Workforce Development Awards to two Clark County organizations at its December board meeting.

The Greater Vancouver Chamber of Commerce (GVCC) received the Innovation in Workforce Development Award for its stemCONNECT program that introduces students in grades 6-12 to high-demand career pathways through structured onsite visits to local businesses. GVCC partnered with the Southwest Washington STEM Network, DIY Marketing Center and nConnect, with support from Banfield Pet Hospital and SEH America, to launch the program.

Interject Data Systems received the Excellence in Building Workforce Partnerships Award for its efforts to help individuals in our community learn about, embrace and use technology.

CEO Jeff Honsowetz and his team work closely with Washington State University Vancouver to mentor and apprentice college students, helping them develop real-world professional experience while completing their last two years of study.

Jeff introduced a kids coding club six years ago to provide free instruction and help children gain confidence to create with technology. Chris Hight, a Data Engineer with Interject, started Future of Code clubs and classes that occur in multiple locations throughout Vancouver.

“Local employers are a critical piece of our regional educational partnerships, ensuring our young adults are ready to work in high-demand fields across our community,” said Workforce Southwest Washington CEO Kevin Perkey. “We can accomplish much more together than individually.”

Companies Sought for Youth Employment Summit

The Youth Employment Summit (YES) on March 19, 2019 is THE place to engage with your future workforce, promote your company, industry and job opportunities.

Preparing youth with skills and options is vital for our local economy and crucial to filling your company’s workforce needs.

The YES event provides young adults an opportunity to explore careers in our region’s high-growth, high-demand industries AND find first jobs! We are expecting 600 students from school districts in Clark, Cowlitz and Wahkiakum counties.

Your company has three opportunities to participate:

1. Host a table. Healthcare, Tech, Manufacturing and Construction companies can host a table to share information about your company, education and training needed to do the jobs at your company, open jobs, etc., answer questions and provide hands-on activities. Let us know if you need help designing an activity.
2. Hire a student. Businesses in ANY INDUSTRY that would like to hire students (particularly 16-18 year olds) can request a table. Work experience is where individuals build the foundation that will propel them forward throughout their careers and where they learn what it means to be a good employee.

3. Be a sponsor. Your support ensures as many young people as possible have an opportunity to participate.

If you would like to host a table or hire a student, please register at https://bit.ly/2BAryWi. Registration is free.

Want to sponsor the event? Contact Darcy Hoffman, Director of Business Services at Workforce Southwest Washington.

We look forward to seeing you in March!

CloudOne Honored with Hire-a-Vet Award

CloudOne, a Vancouver-based company that offers marketing solutions to the automotive industry received a Hire-A-Vet Award from the Washington Employment Security Department (ESD) for its track record of hiring veterans.

In 2018, CloudOne increased its focus on hiring veterans and boosted its veteran workforce to 10 percent. The company coordinates its veteran recruitment through WorkSource and advertises its openings on military job boards and veteran social media sites. It also participates in the state’s YesVets program to promote the hiring of veterans.

Rep. Brandon Vick (on right in photo) of the 18th Legislative District presented the award to CloudOne co-founder Bryan Hunter at a ceremony on November 14.

ESD created the Hire-A-Vet Award to call attention to unemployed veterans and recognize companies with a good track record of hiring, retaining and celebrating veterans in their workforce. A winner was selected from each of the state’s 12 workforce development areas. Click to view the winners.
Meet Benton Waterous

As a Program Manager at WSW, Benton oversees several initiatives including the development of Summer Works paid internships for young adults and sector-driven curriculum for the Next youth center. He is also identifying opportunities to collaborate with affordable housing partners to integrate employment and training programs.

Prior to joining WSW, Benton was an intern at the Potomac Institute for Policy Studies, a Washington D.C. think tank, where he provided research support and wrote articles to inform the public and decision makers about security policy issues.

As a Trade Analyst Intern with the World Trade Center Denver, Benton organized and planned events, coordinated community outreach, facilitated educational programming, managed membership development and assisted in trade and gap analysis research.

He has held positions with Gonzaga University’s Center for Global Engagement and with Startalk Chinese Language Camp. As a Center for Community Action and Service Learning volunteer he worked as an afterschool mentor for at-risk elementary school students and participated in a mission trip to collaborate with students on the Makah Indian Reservation.

Benton has a passion for the education and empowerment of youth and has served as a volunteer at the Oregon Historical Society, and as a National Park Service educational interpreter.

He has a Bachelor’s Degree in International Studies from Gonzaga University and certificates in policy research and international business.

In his free time, Benton is an avid skateboarder, artist, and consumer of written materials on history and politics.

Reach Benton at bwaterous@workforcesw.org or 360.567.3182.
Companies Benefit from Youth Internships

Work experience at a young age contributes to higher graduation rates, better future employment prospects and increased earnings later in life.

Through programs funded by WSW, paid internships are available for students ages 16-18. They will have the opportunity to earn money, gain valuable work experience and develop soft skills to help them become ready for a job, additional training or college.

For assistance hiring young adults for part-time or summer jobs, contact Benton Waterous at bwaterous@workforcesw.org or 360.567.3182.

Accomplished and Under 40

Congratulations to Miriam Martin, WSW’s Program Director, and Morgan Parker, Director of Next, on being selected by the Vancouver Business Journal as part of its Accomplish and Under 40 Class of 2018. Click here to read the article and see the other honorees.
