Program launches to bring employment services into the Clark County Jail

Vancouver, WA (Nov. 22, 2016) – Workforce Southwest Washington (WSW), Clark County Sheriff’s Office Reentry Program and WorkSource held a ribbon cutting on November 16 to celebrate the launch of a new program, Linking to Employment Activities Pre-release (LEAP).

The program will bring WorkSource’s employment services into the Clark County jail to help up to 100 incarcerated individuals learn the skills they need to get a job and reintegrate into the community after they are released.

Case management and training will be provided at the jail by WorkSource staff, including in-person and online workshops, resume and cover letter writing and connections to additional services, such as housing, transportation, childcare, behavioral health services and more. After release, individuals will continue to receive employment and job training services at the WorkSource center at 204 SE Stonemill Drive, Suite 215, Vancouver 98684.

By helping individuals obtain skills and jobs, the program aims to increase the number of individuals finding and maintaining employment and decrease the number of individuals who return to jail in the future. The two-year pilot program is funded through an $800,000 grant from the Department of Labor.
