Vancouver, Wash. (October 8, 2015) – The Southwest Washington Workforce Development Council (SWWDC) is funding a program to provide free training to give individuals skills to help them obtain jobs in manufacturing.

Individuals interested in learning more about the Certified Production Technician (CPT) program should attend a free orientation on October 13 at 2 p.m. at WorkSource, 5411 E. Mill Plain, Suite 15, Vancouver or October 15 at 2 p.m. at Clark College's main campus 1933 Fort Vancouver Way, PUB 258C, Vancouver. To RSVP and for more information, contact Jessica at WorkSource at 360-947-0115 or javery@esd.wa.gov.

Attainment of the CPT certificate will increase a participant's employability by demonstrating to employers that the individual possess the core competencies required in manufacturing. Participants who complete training successfully will be certified in safety, manufacturing processes and production, maintenance awareness, quality practices and measurement.

Participants who complete the training will be eligible for no-cost career coaching and job placement services through WorkSource.

Applicants must be at least 18 years of age and have a GED or high school diploma. Manufacturing experience is not required but applicants should have an interest in working in manufacturing.

Classes will be held at Clark College's Columbia Tech Center campus Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays from October 26 through December 19.

Space is limited and individuals are encouraged to contact WorkSource immediately for details.
